

Observation of Classroom Structure

Are these elements present in the classroom?

- Classroom rules are clearly displayed at student eye level and written at student's comprehension level.
- A Positive Behavior System is in place for praising and acknowledging student's developmental, academic, and behavioral accomplishments.
- Procedures and routines are clearly defined, well established, and consistently enforced.
- A process is in place for quick recording of developmental, academic and behavioral data.
- Classroom organization and structure allow for smooth transitions between groups, classes, and activities.
- Procedures are in place for dealing with severe/dangerous behaviors.

Comments: